THOUGHT and COMMENT EXPLORING

Exploring is great fun. Do you remember those days of childhood when with fear and trembling we sought out the unknown places in the great barn or perhaps in the new house into which we had recently moved? The anticipations of finding "something thrilling which in reality we were afraid to meet? This instinct of exploration so prominent in childhood continues all through life. Those people who keep it alive and feed it with continued exploration enjoy life the most. But where shall we explore? Surely we cannot go seeking for new lands or worlds to discover, like that which Columbus found. Neither can we be like unto Admiral Peary and go to the North Pole. What then?

Mr. Edison develops his instinct for exploration in the field of electricity, finding new worlds of wonder and usefulness into which to advertise or expand business. Still others are prying into the secrets of knowledge where in are the wonders of the mind. This is a great field. This is the value of an education. We do not send boys to college to teach them how to make money but how to use their minds in the exploration of the mind which is illimitable in its boundaries.

What a joy there is in the birth of a new idea! What a thrill to look into the unknown of knowledge! And it requires hard work. It requires hard work and sacrifice for Columbus and for Peary to explore. For Louis Pasteur to explore the wonders of the germ life through which he has done more for mankind than any other man or person outside of the Man of Galilee. One cannot explore the depths of the mind without hard work and sacrifice. But it pays a thousand fold.

And what shall we say more? Think of the field of morals and spirit which men hesitate to enter lest they be called religious. We are so much animal that we dread being thought the sons of God. The hardest and most sacrificial of all exploration is in the field of morals and religion. Witness the great leaders in these fields of activity. The jungle of life is crowded with the wild and fierce threats of men if you invade their personal liberty of thought and life to improve their state and that of society. Every great reformer and religious leader the world has had has suffered persecution and sacrifice in his efforts to invade and explore the realms of the soul and social living. But it pays and is great fun. They are rare.

NEW SEA HUNT FOR EVANGELIST TO START TODAY

Reported Finding of Bathing Suit of Evangelist Causes Excitement

(By Universal Service)
LOS ANGELES, May 24.—Search for the body of Aimee Semple McPherson famous pastor of Angelus Temple continued today at Santa Monica where she is believed to have drowned in the surf last Tuesday.

Aeroplane skimming the waves for hours and divers again risked their lives in the broken piling beneath Lick pier and hundreds of Angelus Temple volunteers formed a "human chain" and patrolled the beach all day but no trace of the missing evangelist was found. Excitement was caused late today when it was reported that the bathing suit worn by Mrs. McPherson when she went into the surf was found in her automobile in Angelus Temple. Following an investigation it was announced by the police that the bathing suit belonged to Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, neighbor.

A big new sea hunt for Mrs. McPherson will begin early tomorrow morning. Deep sea divers headed by Captain Fred Henderson and Robert Hunt will be assisted by constable Ed Harrison of Catalina who holds and underwater record of three minutes. Harrison made preliminary explorations off Lick pier this afternoon. He reported the underwater very strong and held the opinion that the body would not be found near that spot.

The city chemist reported that an analysis of orange juice and bon-bons purchased by Mrs. McPherson before she entered the water Tuesday showed them "pure and unadulterated." The probability of passing an emergency ordinance permitting the burial of Mrs. McPherson's body within Angelus Temple in the event her body is recovered was discussed by the city council today. Request for a permit for such a burial is said to have been made by the evangelist's mother.

Paulsen Starts Five Homes In East Richmond

Building Total For Month Is Swelled by $18,500 by Permits Taken out Yesterday

As the beginning of a building program by the A. L. Paulsen Realty service, permits were secured for the erection of five one-story cottages on the north side of Solano avenue between Thirty-eighth and Thirty-ninth streets yesterday.

The dwellings will be placed on lots over forty feet in width and will be grouped to give a pleasing effect to the block. Two of the houses will be of Spanish architecture and the other three will be Colonial. The cost of the houses will be $3,500 each and S. P. Robeson is the contractor.

In speaking of the building program A. L. Paulsen declared that the houses will be modern in every respect and will be built to meet the needs of the average person. The large lots, he declared, will guarantee sufficient light and air as the houses will not be built closely together. The houses are being built to sell under $5,000 and will be of frame and stucco construction.

Building permits issued yesterday by City Building Inspector E. E. Grow amounted to $18,350.

Minor permits issued included a permit for the construction of an office for the Richmond Syndicate on the west side of Tenth street between Macdonald and Nevin avenues, costing $250; for a one-car garage costing $100 to be erected by John Robak on the east side of McLaughlin street between Garvin and Edmond avenues; and a one-story cottage on the east side of Fourth street between Nevin and Barrett avenues to be erected by A. C. Silveira at the cost of $500.

Loop-hole in Law To Be Corrected

(By Universal Service)
WASHINGTON, May 24.—Acting to block a loop-hole through which many law breakers have escaped prison sentences, the Department of Justice today took steps to obtain an early Supreme Court ruling on the effect of a "nolo contendere" plea.

This plea—a refusal to contest charges contained in an indictment—has been widely regarded as permitting a court to impose only a fine. Some judges, however, have taken a contrary view. Originally the plea was used in England to compromise charges by paying a moderate fine.

Deepening of Harbor Is Discussed at Luncheon

That the Inner Harbor should be dredged to a depth of thirty feet throughout and that efforts should start immediately toward obtaining the necessary Government survey and Government financial aid was an emphatic declaration made at the meeting of the Richmond Industrial Commission yesterday. Particular emphasis was placed on the dredging to thirty feet in all parts of the harbor and not just to the western end of the entrance channel near the City Terminal or Wharf No. 1. A new river and harbor bill will go before Congress this winter, which should carry the Richmond plan.

It was set forth that the most important section of the harbor for development of industrial payroll and shipping activities is the sheltered inner section and that this portion should be deepened with the rest of the project. Industries are already locating there and have come on a promise of completion of the harbor.

That a channel of 400 feet wide with a thirty-foot depth could be dredged from the deep water off the wharves of the Standard Oil long pier to the present mouth of the inner harbor entrance channel near the Santa Fe terminal at a cost of $125,000 was an assertion made that was verified by City Manager J. A. McVittie. He said a dredging company had estimated the work at those figures, as it could be done at 10 cents a yard, the material being soft.

The portions of the harbor already dredged could be deepened to thirty feet at a cost of about $200,000. There is $128,000 left in the Government fund and enough old bonds not issued to duplicate that amount. The total cost of deepening to thirty feet with sufficient widths to develop the large commerce and industry would be less than 10 cents addition to the tax rate—in fact nearer 8 cents.

With the nataratorium and Wharf No. 2, taking care of their own bond cost and returning a surplus further harbor improvement is more feasible. The next tax levy will be lessened by 18 cents, directly levied this year for dredging the terminal basin.

Councilman E. J. Garrard replied in answer to a question that he believed that if some industry so large that it would insure the success of the population and prosperity of Richmond were to state that it would locate on the harbor with a thirty-foot depth it would be wise to provide the thirty feet. This could be done by the city by a bond issue. New assessable wealth would be relied on to take care of this issue without raising the tax rate.

President Harry Ellis, in a welcoming the large gathering of citizens interested in the topics under discussion, said that harmony of action among all civic bodies would speed up action that would get harbor results at an early date. He said that harmony existed 100 per cent. He congratulated the Chamber of Commerce for aiding in obtaining construction of Wharf No. 2, which will apparently be a great success and which has resulted in a rail line being built to the harbor.

The opinion was advanced that much deliberation should be given to any proposition to lease to private parties the harbor lands and wharves owned by the city, and that at any rate guarantees backed by substantial bond to carry out major improvements at a certain expenditure, should be demanded in case of a decision to lease. The harbor is just now (Continued on Page 6).

Signs to Protect School Children

The city council last night instructed City Manager James A. McVittie to purchase two signs to be installed on Twenty-third street and Clinton avenue as a safeguard to the school children in the Grant school district. A report on the committee investigating traffic conditions near the school recommended the installation of the signs as the best means of regulating the traffic conditions.

Council Postpones Action on Law of Used Parts Business

A report on the ordinance governing the licensing of dealers selling used cars which was to be made to the city council last night was postponed until the next meeting of the council.

At the last meeting of the council F. C. Shell, proprietor of a used parts business on Macdonald avenue told the council that if the ordinance licensing the sale of used cars applied to him it would work such a hardship on his business that he would be forced to suspend operations. City Attorney T. M. Carlson was instructed to investigate the present ordinance which is believed was not intended to refer to such places of business as conducted by Shell and if he found that the present ordinance did apply he was instructed to prepare an amendment.

THIS FIRE WENT TO THE FIREMEN

It is one thing for the firemen to go to a fire and it is another thing to have the fire brought to them. On Sunday at Danville, Orlando Bartolomei had a slight accident. Said accident occurred when in some manner a box of matches in Bartolomei's pockets ignited. Bartolomei rushed through Elliott Park with his trousers ablaze and his voice at the highest pitch, calling for a fireman to rescue him. At the time the Martinez firemen were holding a picnic in the park and rushed to the man's aid.

Council Asks Change In Street Car Stop

The city council last night instructed City Manager James A. McVittie to ask the Key System Transit company to move its present stop on Clarence street to a point above or below the place now in use as a stop. Councilman E. J. Garrard declared that if the present stop were removed, safety to pedestrians, especially school children would be bettered.

Library Bills In El Cerrito Cause Debate

Payment of light, fuel, water and rent bills for the library was a matter that brought forth much discussion at the meeting of the board of trustees of El Cerrito Monday night.

A motion made by trustee Fred Lutz provided that the city pay the expenses until such a time as the library would be moved into the new Fairmont school building caused an objection by trustee Phil A. Lee who stated that the El Cerrito Improvement Association had always paid the bills and were still willing to do so and thought that the city should save that money.

Mrs. Grace McCarthy secretary of the Improvement Association stated they did not know that the city intended to pay the bills until she went to pay them and found that the city had already settled for them and as the association has always paid the bills should be allowed to continue to do so.

Trustee Lutz replied that he had brought the matter before the board because county librarian Alice Whitbeck told him that she did not want any association handling the affairs of the library.

Then a vote was called. Trustee Phil A. Lee voted in the negative and trustees Chas. Zimmerman, Fred Lutz, Chas. McDermott and George Conlon in the affirmative.

CITY ALTERS PAVING PLANS

Because residents in the East Richmond district object to the present proceedings on the improvement of streets in that section of the city, the city council last night rescinded a resolution passed some time previous and ordered a resolution prepared calling for the improvements as petitioned by the residents.

The residents desire that all improvements including street work and sidewalks be made at one time. City Engineer E. A. Hoffman told the council last night that the value of the property would not permit all of the improvements being contracted for at once. Because of this, he declared, he had prepared the proceedings eliminating the sidewalks, which were planned to be made at a future date.

This plan, he stated, would in the end be cheaper to the property owners although it would necessitate double work and expenses for the engineering department of the city.

The residents, according to a report, are circulating a petition asking that the sidewalks be installed first, if both can not be completed at once.

The city engineer said that he doubted if any contractor would bid for the work if all of the improvements are made in one job. (Continued on Page 6).

FIVE CENT FARE TO BE ASKED BY THE OPERATORS

Merchants Asking Service State That a Bus Line Would Increase Business

Requesting the city council for permission to conduct a bus service from Twenty-third street and Macdonald avenue to Standard Oil company refinery, a petition made by merchants of the city was presented to the city council last night. According to C. E. Barber, who signed the request on behalf of the merchants it is the plan of the company to operate a bus service at cost of five cents per passenger and it agrees to pay ten per cent of the profits to the city for the requested privilege.

The petition states that the service will increase business as it will be an inducement to residents in the Point Richmond district to bring them into the business section of the city. It will also increase patronage at the Nataratorium past which it is planned to operate the buses.

The matter was referred to the City Attorney T. M. Carlson for one week to find out whether the city has the right to grant permission. It was stated that such permission would in all probability have to be received from the State Railroad commission, in accordance with the state law. The city attorney was instructed to report on the matter at the next meeting of the city council.

MAY

According to mythology, May was the daughter of Atlas and the mother of Mercury by Jupiter. This explains a great deal. Blood will tell. The volatile nature of the month is accounted for, the variable-ness and capricious qualities understood, Mercury was his mother's own son. Yet, withal, it seems eminently safe how to sing the Song of Solomon, which has the place of honor at the head of this dissertation. Spring has come, and May is here in something more than name. There can be no mistake about it, spring is at hand. For lo! here and there upon the streets of the city the straw hat appears, furtively and cautiously row, but by and by gravely and blithely. Furthermore, the dandelions, those ten-dollar gold pieces fresh from the mint of spring, are bespangling every grassy sward.

The apple trees are in blossom, a sight worth going far to see. Henry Ward Beecher averred that an apple tree in bloom puts to shame every woman who has attempted to dress since the world began. A strong statement, this, and admits of some qualification and exception. Still, it compliments the apple tree and can not possibly detract from a maiden lovely in plaited crepe skirt and jacket, silk stockings and shoes to match—nothing can detract from her. An apple tree in bloom is not only lovely to the eye, since the wax-like petals are perfect, but the faint perfume thereof is exquisite, and once known and identified, never to be forgotten. Peach, plum and pear trees have surrendered to the charm of May, and their blooms regal in undisputed sway for a pathetically brief reign. Violets and other vagrant flowers, after braving snow and gloomy days, are happy now in the fellowship of the friendly sun.

The migrants are here in numbers which increase daily. The large family of warblers are constantly arriving, and even though their small bodies can not always be seen because of the heavier foliage, their notes never over-strong but sweet and low can be distinguished by every listening ear. Most of the birds begin house-keeping in this month of May, and by the first of June their babies begin to demand attention. House-making and home-keeping even among the birds is exacting and takes heavy toll from the parents in patience, fortitude and downright courage. The natural enemies of a bird's home are numerous, wary, and some of them cruel and bloodthirsty in the extreme. Then a wind storm may undo and defeat the work of nest-building carried on through may a busy day of constant plucking and pulling, placing and arranging of straws, pieces of string and twigs. House-keeping and home-making among all God's creatures is a commingling of joy and pain, singing and sighing, high hopes and bitter loss!

May is the Memorial month, and the thirtieth day is set apart, and rightfully so, as sacred to the heroic dead who fell on battlefield, died in camp or perished in prison pen for the sake of a mighty cause. God's Acre is never so lovely and its grim tokens rainbow-bowed with hope as "when spring comes back with rustling shade and apple blossoms fill the air." Nature is never partisan, never petty, and the sun's rays fall with equal splendor over the graves of soldiers of the common good who fought under different banners but gave their all with superb abandon when the great testing time came. The Blue and the Gray are together today, and joint Memorial Days are the accepted order in many a section where once the Mason and Dixon line was a reality.

When comes May with its blossoms, its bird song, its glory of sun, its caressing winds and warm

Some Pages from American History

HULL'S MARCH TO DETROIT

The Americans planned to attack Canada, with the hope of annexing it. The first move was to send General William Hull to Detroit. Hull had been highly spoken of by Washington for his services during the revolution. In order to reach Detroit from Urbana, Ohio, he had to build two hundred miles of road through forests and swamps. It was a tremendous piece of work, but Hull accomplished it and reached Detroit.

The march to Detroit, however, had been begun before war was actually declared; hence the Canadians received word before Hull did. They cut off most of the supplies of provisions and powder that he expected to receive. Back of Detroit were the forests full of hostile savages. In front was a force of Canadians and Indians, under the English general, Brock. General Brock summoned the Americans to surrender. Hull did not wait to be attacked, and he didn't fire a single gun at the enemy, but he hoisted a white table cloth as a signal to Brock. He gave up the fort, and with it Detroit and Michigan.

A court of American army officers tried Hull and convicted him of cowardice. He was sentenced to be shot. President Madison, however, pardoned him on account of his service during the Revolution. General Hull said in defense of his act that he surrendered in order to save the women and children of Detroit from the scalping knives of the Indians, who formed part of Brock's force.

FAMILIAR OLD STITCHES IN DELIGHTFUL NEW DESIGNS

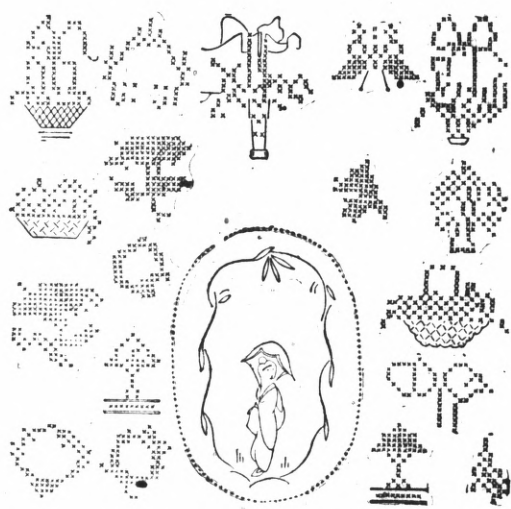

The Season's Frocks and Blouses are all the More Attractive Because of their Touches of Embroidery

By MONA MULLEN

TO SAY that cross-stitch embroidery is more popular than ever, even though cross-stitch is one of the oldest of embroidery stitches, is simply to state a fact that is patent to the woman who keeps in touch with the novelties featured in smart shops and in the embroidery departments of important stores.

It is used in a greater number of ways than ever, being in demand for dresses, blouses—especially the new peasant designs—children's dresses, and an endless list of articles for the household.

The transfer illustrated is in colors, twelve different motifs being furnished, ranging in height from 1½ to 6¾ inches. With a few of the designs it is necessary to combine the outline stitch, but this is also as old and even simpler than the cross-stitch. The embroidery should be done with three-strand floss in the colors stamped on the transfer.

One, however, need not be confined to this arrangement, because very often it is desired to carry out a definite color scheme. The floss may then be selected in just the shades that will harmonize with the article that is to be trimmed.

Bedroom, bathroom and kitchen sets are attractive when embroidered in cross-stitch. Bedspreads made of squares of scrim or linen, then joined together with bands of lace, with cross-stitch motifs in the center, are very beautiful. When made at home they cost very little, but when one sets out to buy any of these novelties for gifts or personal use, then it is discovered how expensive they are.

Table runners, luncheon sets, guest towels, and vanity sets are other possibilities that may be considered in connection with these cross-stitch motifs.

BROKEN HEARTS of HOLLYWOOD

BY EDWARD CLARK

Copyrighted by Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
"BROKEN HEARTS OF HOLLYWOOD" with Louise Dresser is a Warner picturization of this novel.

CHAPTER I
The steel rails of the Transcontinental line were a curving rainbow arcing her toward the pot of gold that was Hollywood, yet even this shining promise of California straight ahead was temporarily forgotten in the sudden and powerful sense of being "at home" that wave into the day dreams of the lone girl traveller on the Los Angeles Limited.

It was uncanny that these alien fields, upon which she had never set eyes before, seemed as vaguely familiar as some turned back page. Pressing on her consciousness from the first instant her train had rushed into the Valley was a delicate weight, as of the forecast shadow of a coming event. Always in the doorstep of great changes in individual human destinies there comes a subtle sense of something about to happen—a mysterious breath from a newly opened room of the eternal future.

The shy wayfarer, with hair the color of harvest wheat tops and cheeks the tint of plucked roses and the texture of appleskin, pressed a cameo nose against the fortunate windowpane and stared with strangely quickened interest at the fleeting transience of Iowa farmlands.

Valleys are so rare in that flat corner of Iowa that the surprise of his perfect skyward vista was pronounced. Locked in shaggy paw of unexpected hills the Valley lay like a green chalice into which the sun poured the melted lemons of its light, while the whipped cream of puffy clouds dripped over the ruffled rim.

She had never known much of a home or of home life, this orphan whose face bore the fresh charm and the hopeful ambitions of twenty, but whose eyes profoundly reflected the thwarted wisdom of two-score years. Perhaps, therefore, it was a chronic nostalgia that stirred her. Or was it some inherited strain of romance tumbling rough her eager pulses? Whichever or whatever it laid gentle hold upon her heartstrings, Dreaming over the verdant prospect, the wistful journeyer experienced that rare ecstasy which fills human identity with old friends; which thrills a hunter in from the hills at the purpling end of a winter's day when he spies the figure of his well-beloved outlined in living welcome against a yellow patch of cabin doorway; which thrills a sailor straining his eyes from the tops when the blue marge of homeland trembles on the horizon.

The locomotive whistle vibrantly heralding a stop jolted the girl out of her reveries; startled her back to the reality of many long hours of travel still ahead. This could not be Journey's End.

"What town are we coming to, Aloysius?" she inquired as the fat colored porter waddled past with the ever-ready sceptre of his office—an oversize whiskbroom.

"Centipede, missy—Centipede, to-day, an' we stop here 'bout ten minutes to take on water."

The monarch of the Pullman grinned expansively upon the little girl, who, for want of someone with whom to talk, had confided the joyous secret of her journey to him soon after the train had left Chicago. Aloysius in turn had whispered it to every other person in the car, so that the mysterious young beauty had been a target for the envious yet friendly glances of the women and the admiring looks of the men passengers ever since.

Centipede, Iowa! Nothing romantic about that name! And yet, with the aura of her peculiar day dream still lingering over her the girl did not relax her intimate interest in the scenery. Open fields were giving way now to shady streets, wide and grassy. Towering trees, the great pines that fasten human hearts to home soils, nodded over the village cottages, which were prim and white—each with its picket fence, like a starched ruff around a newly laundered shirt.

All the dear villages she had read of in the greatest novels, all the quaint homelands she had seen on the mellow canvases of the greatest painters, were summed up in this lovely town of the mid-western plains. The place overpowered her for a moment with so poignant a sense of quietude and home that her hands moved in an involuntary gesture toward her suitcase as the train slid to its appointed stop.

Then she remembered—and laughed uneasily. She became conscious of a vista of upturned faces outside; of a milling crowd untoward in even so small a town for the most important event of each day—the passing of the Limited. Something out of the ordinary was plainly afoot. As the noise of creaking wheel trucks and hissing air brakes died down it blended into a confused clatter of tin and whang of gut-a-village band in gala blast.

The girl, in common with her car weary fellow passengers, hurried toward the door, as much to see what all the commotion was about as to stretch their ailed bound legs.

Descending to the platform beside the grinning porter, they gazed with lively interest upon the animated scene at the end of the station, where an enthusiastic crowd of townspeople surrounded a group of three—a tall young man, a pretty girl and an elderly woman who was crying without embarrassment.

When a small town celebrates there is a spontaneity and an intense concentration that in cities is unknown and impossible. Centipede had on its best bib and tucker this day. Even the drab depot was faced with a sheet of bunting that gave the impression of a multi-colored napkin stuck in the vest of a stout man.

Evening in the crowd seemed to be talking at once—abouting. What with the jangle of the band, however, it was impossible to catch a word of what they were saying or of any hint as to the nature of the celebration. But inasmuch as the tall young man had his arm around the pretty girl and was kissing her time to time, it was not difficult for the interested passengers to reach a conclusion.

"Just married!" the smirk went from one to another. The lone girl traveller reserved a thought to herself. "And he's rather good looking too!"

"Lord turn me white," chuckled Aloysius through his thick lips, "if that boy ain't the town shak—and I don't mean maybe."

"Guess his shekin' days are over," smiled the girl, who felt the twinges of jealousy that every romantically inclined unmarried female always feels when she sees another handsome man married off—to someone other than herself.

For, contrary to traditional belief, it is only the men who are the least whit interested in "seeing the bride."

The lone girl traveller moved away now toward the front end of the station, where she enjoyed a brisk turn or two—grateful relief after many hours of unaltered riding.

Not until she saw the giant Mallard, its tank filled to overflowing, sliding back to be recouped to the train did she retrace her steps toward her own car at the rear end. Most of the other passengers had already returned aboard. The celebrating villagers were moving steps where Aloysius waited. Evidently the honeymooners were to be her car mates! Well, that would be interesting; and it would serve to divert her from the limelight of passenger curiosity which, had grown to be just a bit of a bore.

She hurried to board ahead of the honeymooners, not wanting to get caught in the swirling crowd. It was nip and tuck, for Aloysius was warning them to hurry. She made it first, but alas for speed!—she caught her heel on a step and fell back plumb into the arms of the handsome bridegroom.

HOLEPROOF OF ALL FINE HOSIERY OFFERS

5 Unique Fashion Features

Plus 31 new Paris colors

NOTE: Holeproof's 5 famous style points carefully. Together they safeguard you against imperfect hose. In style—in sheer richness of beauty, this hosiery stands supreme. Through special features smartness is increased to an extraordinary degree. And Holeproof styles are accepted as authoritative.

A few manufacturers of fine hosiery may offer you some of these features, but not one can give them all. By them fashion tells you to judge silk hosiery.

Exquisite cleanliness. In sheer chiffons, cleanliness comes only with the use of uniformly even texture. The lack of it in cheaper silk causes unsightly shadow rings. So, at greater cost, Holeproof selects China silk, judged finest of all oriental grades.

Correct Paris shades. Paris authorities select the newest colors. A unique scientific dyeing process keeps them clear and bright. Our anti-fade treatment protects from fading.

Superlative transparency. Even in the heavier weights there is no cloudiness, no streaks. First, the silk is specially treated, then it undergoes the special scientific Holeproof treatment.

No loose ends. Loose threads mar appearance. So Holeproof carefully trims the inside of each stocking by hand.

No imperfections. Style vanishes with imperfections. And here Holeproof safeguards you by nine separate inspections. It is a fact that few other fine hose are so uniformly perfect.

Every Holeproof number has this five-fold fashion safety. Every color is new—every style is faultlessly and fashionably correct.

MANY INJURED IN TRAIN CRASH NEAR NEW YORK

(By Universal Service)

MANSFIELD, Mass., May 24.—More than a score were injured, many of them seriously, when the Owl Express, which left Boston for New York early today, crashed into the rear end of a freight train just before reaching the station here, sending three coaches, carrying approximately 100 passengers asleep in their berths off the track.

The crash sent three freight cars into the signal tower, knocking it down. Both tower and freight cars then went up in flames, this cutting the surrounding off from all communications with Boston.

Local firemen and residents were quickly on the scene and started blazing the passengers out of the coaches. Ambulances were soon called to the scene and all available automobiles commandeered to transport the injured to hospitals.

As soon as word was received in Providence, a relief train with doctors and nurses was made up and rushed here.

It arrived at 3:30 a.m. Two hours after the accident occurred and started back soon afterwards with the more seriously injured.

Four of the seriously injured identified are:

E. Redding, New Haven, fireman on the Owl.

J. W. Burley, engineer of the Owl, internal injuries; expected to die.

Arthur Bold, Chelsea, Mass., passenger on the Owl.

George Hughes, East Providence, R.I., brakeman on freight.

Among the passengers on one of the derailed Owl coaches were a group of Keith vaudeville artists including Blossom Selley, the four Lamons, Walter Kane, Paul Barnes, Betty Washington and the Ray Sisters. These are all at the Mansfield Tavern suffering from shock and minor bruises.

The Owl engine shot across three tracks, tying up all traffic from New York to Boston.

Estimate of Growth Of Big Cities is Made by Government

WASHINGTON, May 24.—The Old New York will have a population of just about six million people on July 1 this year.

Father knickerbocker's family to be exact will total 5,924,000 on that date, the census bureau of the commerce department announced today after a bit of careful estimating.

The 1920 census gave New York 5,620,000. The estimated increase is based on the rate of growth between 1910 and 1920 and on the 1925 state census which gave the big town 5,873,356.

Chicago, the census figures say, will break over the three million mark, with an estimated population on July 1 of 3,048,000, a nice little jump from the 2,701,005 total of the 1920 census.

Philadelphia's estimate is 2,008,000, compared with 1,823,779 in 1920, with Detroit booming along in fourth place with an estimate of 1,290,000 compared with 1,242,044 taken at a special census in 1925.

And knocking at the door of the million or over mark is Cleveland, with an estimate of 960,000 compared with 796,841 in 1920.

Other estimates as of July 1 this year compared with the 1920 figures are:

Doctors are prescribing a new discovery for constipation, impure blood and bowel indigestion. To millions they are bringing with it quick and remarkable results.

It is a gland secretion, derived from beef livers. It stimulates the flow of bile—up to quart a day. Modern research proves that cathartics never do that.

That flow of bile floods the bowels and keeps them open. The results come over night.

It combats intestinal germs which feed the poisons to the blood. For bile is an antiseptic. It corrects bowel indigestion, for bile is a digestant.

Countless people are getting in this way quick and amazing help in many ill conditions. Your doctor, if you consult him, will probably prescribe it to you. This new discovery is one of the marvels of modern medicine.

Or you can get this liver gland secretion in Dioxol tablets. Each tablet represents ten drops.

"Clip this advertisement. Take it to our Special Agent, La Moine Drug Co., and he will give you a liberal sample of Dioxol free."

GLACIER POINT ROAD TO OPEN NEXT MONDAY

YOSEMITE, May 24.—The Glacier Point road leading to the wonder point of Yosemite National Park, will be open to automobile travel on June 1, according to an announcement made here today by Superintendent W. B. Lewis.

As numerous inquiries are daily being received by the park authorities requesting the earliest possible date the Glacier Point road will be opened, this statement is expected to definitely assist many motorists in planning the time of their departure for the park.

Branching off from Chinquapin on the Wawona Road, the Glacier route traverses thirteen miles of nearly virgin forests, at an elevation approximately 8,000 feet above sea level. The road is crossed by numerous fishing streams, including the well stocked Bridal Veil Creek whose head waters are glacial born and only a few miles off the road.

With the opening of the Glacier Point Hotel on May 15, excellent accommodations are now available with meals being served in the cafeteria. At present Glacier Point can only be reached by saddle horse or foot. Both the eleven mile trail past Vernal and Nevada Falls and the four mile trail near the Sentinel Rock are now open and in daily use by saddle parties and hikers.

Sharing with the wonderful 40 mile panorama of the snow-capped High Sierra region that can be seen from Glacier Point, is the widely known firefall from the point each evening. The latter is a feature that is always popular with the visitor who enjoys witnessing the spectacle from on top of the mountain and later to see an entirely different effect as the firefall is viewed from the floor of Yosemite Valley.

Investigation of Wine Bath of Star Continues in East

(By Universal Service)

NEW YORK, May 24.—The girl in the green coat flashed into the Earl Carroll "wine bath" trial today.

Dorothy Gordon, a pretty chorus girl, testified in Federal court that she loaned her green cloak to Earl Carroll to shield the darling Joyce Hawley from public gaze, just before Joyce took her famous swim in the bathtub of amber liquor on the stage of Carroll's theatre last Washington's birthday.

Several witnesses have testified that the liquor in the tub was champagne, but Carroll says it was gingerale and hence he is on trial for perjury.

Dorothy said she sat in the audience during the bathtub episode. All she saw of Joyce was her head and shoulders above the rim of the tub.

She added that several men went on the stage and gazed into the tub, some of them drinking from it. Joyce was still in the tub, she said, when it was dragged off stage.

Robert Coleman, a dramatic critic, testified he saw Joyce slip off her flimsy underthings and step into the tub of champagne from which a score of men drank.

Coleman engaged in a spirited controversy with Carroll's attorneys.

"You are trying to trick me," he said, "and I won't be tricked." "When was your salary last raised," he was asked.

"Six months ago, not that it's any of our business," he replied.

He admitted, under severe questioning, that he had been asked to leave Carroll's box office. He denied, however, it was because he was asleep in the office, but only when the rush of ticket selling became too active to have more than the ticket salesman in the small room.

Max Lief, an assistant dramatic critic, testified that he drank wine, beer and champagne at the party.

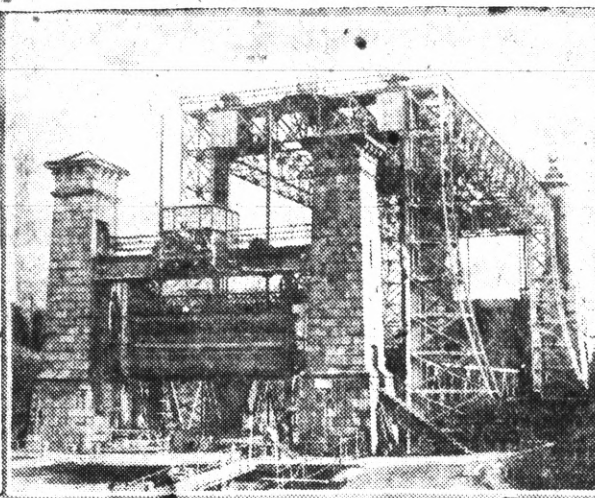

When Carroll's attorneys attempted to make him admit that he didn't know champagne when he tasted it, he said that he had taken at least 150 drinks since prohibition went into effect.

Carroll's defense will be that it was gingerale and not champagne in the tub. This was made plain during the questioning of Lief, when the theatrical producer's attorneys repeated time and again that gingerale is being sold freely under champagne labels and that few persons can tell the difference.

They have made the point that none of the witnesses have been qualified to distinguish between them.

There were many in the courtroom today who believed that the case would be a long one.

Giant Elevator, Capacity 800 Tons, Used Instead Of Locks To Lift Ships 45 Feet in German Canal

A remarkable elevator on the Dortmund-Ems Canal is considered one of the greatest mechanical achievements in the world of modern science and construction. Vessels entering the canal make their way into a huge tank filled with water, which is then hoisted 45 feet by the powerful electrically operated elevator to the upper level of the canal, thus doing away with the cumbersome locks usually used in canals. The picture shows a ship entering the tank to be lifted.

Hoffman Returns From Inspection Tour in the South

After a combined business and pleasure trip during which he inspected the newest types of paving used in Southern California, City Engineer E. A. Hoffman returned to Richmond Sunday. As a result of the trip, a conference will be held soon with city officials at which the city engineer will make a report of his findings.

At this meeting the type of paving to be used in the construction of San Pablo avenue will be discussed and it is expected that the pavement selected will be influenced to a great extent by the results of the inspections made by Hoffman on his recent trip.

As soon as the question of removing the car tracks on Macdonald and San Pablo avenues is decided, the conference will be called by the city officials.

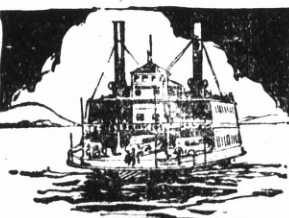

Mrs. Clara Ford and daughter, left for Cheyenne, Wyo., yesterday where she will make her future home.

room today who believe that Carroll will be able to convince the jury that no one has proved there was champagne in the tub.

Ted Shapiro, an accompanist, testified that he was on the stage and saw the liquor and the girl in the tub and that several men drank from the tub while Miss Hawley splashed about in it.

The court room has become known as "the school of scandal." Elevator men call it out in that fashion when they reach the third floor.

Joyce Hawley will testify tomorrow and it is expected that her testimony will furnish the high point of the trial.

"What Is The Meaning Of Neuralgic Pains?"

PERSISTENT attacks of Neuralgic or Sciatic pains point to an impoverished nervous system and a weak, watery condition of the blood.

Darting, stabbing pains with intervals of pain or aching are common to neuralgia, sciatica and lumbago.

The pain follows the nerve trunks or spreads to other nerves and there are tender spots.

In the head—neuralgia. In the back—lumbago. In the hip—sciatica.

Temporary relief is not sufficient for the attacks become frequent and more severe as age advances and it is more and more difficult to obtain relief.

Sleep, relaxation, nutrition are necessary to restore the nervous force exhausted by the activities and worries of life.

And in this connection Dr. Chase's Tonic Pills are most satisfactory as a means of enriching the blood, strengthening the nerves and building up the system, so that it is able to throw off ailments of this nature.

Why suffer these repeated attacks of pain and torture when by a few weeks' patient treatment with this well-known and proven restorative you can bring your system up to a condition that throws off such ailments.

With vitality running low you are an easy prey to colds and all sorts of dangerous diseases.

Neuralgic and sciatic pains are a warning to you to fortify the system by the use of such reconstructive and invigorating treatment as Dr. Chase's Tonic Pills.

DAY OF AVIATION CLOSE AT HAND SAYS EXPERT

(By Universal Service)
ROBERT E. WARD
CHICAGO, May 24.—When Philip K. Wrigley was 10 years old his father gave him a one-lunged motorcycle engine. Not long afterward Philip built it into an automobile, but when he steered the thing around its first corner, all the wheels popped off.
"It was the memory of that wheezy old affair," he said today "that finally led me into naval aviation and recently into the field of commercial air transport."
In his thirty-first year Wrigley is president of the nationally famed concern bearing the name of his father, William Wrigley, Jr. He is also one of the group of young Chicago business men who put Chicago on the aviation map through forming National Air Transportline.
"What I saw and learned at the Great Lakes Naval Training school, with Jack and Bill Mitchell, their cousin Bill Blair, Allister McCormick and many others, convinced me that we will never have real security in the air until we have commercial aviation," he said.
When he answered the call of William R. Dawes, along with young Mitchell and the remainder of the transport organizations' organizers, he was without his father's complete endorsement of his plan, it appears. But he had behind him his service during the war, which had carried him from a second class seaman's rating to a lieutenant. This had enabled him to specialize in experimental work with gas engines so successfully that at the moment the Armistice was signed he was rated superintendent of the aviation mechanics' school, with 2,000 pupils in his classes.
"I think that much of our national air policy is wrong," he declared. "We're continually talking about commercial aviation. Congress appropriates more millions for military and naval aviation. These, in their proper sense, can grow out of commercial flying only."
"Congress should pay more attention to civilian flying."
"Aviation isn't simply a military adjunct or a rich man's sport. I believe we will prove it is good business. But air transport must have advertising. When people begin to know that they do more and better business and keep closer in touch with one another through the air, they'll patronize planes."

Appointment of Dry Officers is Declared Legal

(By Universal Service)
WASHINGTON, May 24.—Attorney General John G. Sargent today declared that President Coolidge's executive order authorizing appointment of local and state officers as dry agents is entirely constitutional and would withstand any court test of its legality.
Sargent's opinion was given shortly after a widespread attack on the executive order in the Senate had ended with presentation by Senator King, of Utah, of a resolution instructing the Senate Judiciary committee to investigate its legality.
"It must be that those who question the legality of the action taken are speaking without knowledge of the facts," Sargent declared.
"There does not appear to be any Federal law, constitutional or statutory, incapacitating a citizen from holding a Federal and state office at the same time."
Sargent then pointed out that the simultaneous holding of such offices was not even restricted, apparently, until 1873, when an executive order provided that acceptance of a state office should be treated as a resignation of the Federal office held.
But many state officers, including justices of the peace, deputy marshals, deputy postoffice inspectors, school board members, and state militia officers were exempted from this order.
"The executive order of May 8, 1926, removes the restriction created by executive order of January 17, 1873, upon the holding of offices of Federal prohibition officers by persons holding state office, and no more," Sargent's opinion continued.
"It does not remove that restriction in case of state officers in current having any forbidding holding of state offices by Federal officers."
Sargent also declared that "concurrent action of the nation and states is contemplated in the Eighteenth Amendment, section 2."

Elks Organize New Luncheon Club Here

Selecting as its name the "Jolly Corks," the original name of the order founded by Charles Vivian in New York City in 1886 and changed two years later to the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, the luncheon club recently organized by the Richmond lodge of Elks held its second luncheon yesterday in the clubhouse.
No meeting of the luncheon club will be held next Monday because of Memorial Day but the club plans to meet on Monday and will secure speakers to address the luncheons.
At the next meeting of the club, Attorney William S. Pierce, president of the Lion's club has been invited to preside at the luncheon. J. R. Garvin will furnish the entertainment.
The officers elected to preside over the destiny of the newly-formed luncheon club consist of: A. C. Lang, primo; J. M. Stewart, vice primo; E. W. Dale, secretary; treasurer; A. H. Winchell, song leader; A. H. Smith, shyluck.

AUTHORITIES ARE INVESTIGATING FIRE IN RODEO

The authorities have launched an investigation into the fire that destroyed outbuildings in the rear of the homes of W. Guill and Harry Faria, at Rodeo on Sunday, resulting in the injury of two men and the killing of 70 chickens.

According to the officials, the fire was of an incendiary origin, and was started in the same way as that of the fire, destroying the Banner Oil refinery on May 16, that resulted in $80,000 damages. In the meantime the police of the county, are on the lookout for a fire-bug suspect.

The fire on Sunday destroyed a barn, three chicken houses, and a cow barn, all large buildings. The blaze had advanced too far into the heart of the buildings before the fire company had responded to the alarm.

During the fighting of the blaze W. Herne and George Crofoot received injuries when a clothes line pole was knocked over. Neither were injured badly.

FOREIGN TRADE OF NATION IS TO BE STRESSED

(By Universal Service)
WASHINGTON, May 24.—America's foreign trade has begun a drive to break down the network of restrictions, licenses, regulations and red tape which hamper its growth, the United States Chamber of Commerce announced today.
Through an American sub-committee, it is assisting the international Chamber of Commerce in a survey of the artificial barriers now standing in the paths of international trade.
This sub-committee consists of Julius H. Barnes, president of the Barnes-Amos Company, of New York, as chairman; Walker D. Hines, former director of railways; F. Edson White, president of Armour & Company, of Chicago and John N. Willys, president of the Willys Overland Company of Toledo.
It will lay before the international body a vast series of complaints against unreasonable customs regulations and the heavy fines imposed by countries for minor infractions of regulations.
Protest will be made against unreasonable consular fees and regulations, tax discriminations, legal barriers affecting the rights of foreigners, and governmental and private monopolies of materials and trade.

The findings of the American committee will be reported to the meeting of the international committee in Paris June 22. Later the report of the entire international survey and recommendations of the international Chamber in June, 1927.

Laws You Don't Want

Laws requiring the Santa Fe and other railroads to spend money needlessly, tend to keep freight rates up. Limiting length of trains and saying how many men shall be employed to run a train, to that extent prevent lowering costs. This is your problem, too. Think it over.

In a manufacturing business the greater the output the lower the cost per unit.

Therefore all progressive manufacturing concerns try to increase volume of output.

The railroads of this country are in the manufacturing business. They make and sell transportation.

Obviously it is to their interest to sell their product at as low a price as possible, in order to increase volume of business handled.

To sell at a lower price they must get their costs down to as low a figure as possible consistent with good service.

They cannot lower prices for materials and supplies, or wages, the latter being fixed by agreements with the men and by the Labor Board established by law.

The only other way left is by more efficient operation—that means handling more freight per man employed. To handle more freight economically means larger locomotives, better track and longer trains.

Laws limiting the number of cars in a train, or saying how many men shall be employed on a train, are laws which to that extent prevent lowering costs and keep up rates.

Any laws that require the railroads to spend money needlessly have a tendency to keep up rates.

While primarily this is a railroad problem, in the end it affects your own business as well. That is why your attention is called to it in this way. Think it over.
